National Competition

Up to 3 of the winners from the Category of Higher Education Institution have the priority to be selected according to the regulations of the "21st Century Cup" National English Speaking Competition to represent Macao at the national competition finals, according to the arrangements of the national competition in 2027.

Rules for Preliminary Round and Final Contestants:

Bring your ID with you

All contestants must bring with them their original ID card or passport for check-in on the day of the competition. Contestants in the Category of Higher Education Institution must also bring with them their current valid student ID card as the proof for being a full-time bachelor's degree student in Macao.

Any contestant who fails to show their original ID document(s) risks being disqualified.

Be punctual

All contestants must arrive on and check-in on time at their assigned venue.

Any contestant who fails to arrive and check-in on time risks not being allowed to take part in the contest according to the decision of the Organising Committee.

No identification of school or institution

To avoid partiality in judging and evaluation (in order to be fair to everyone), contestants are not allowed to wear uniform of any school or institution, nor anything that can identify their school or institution or programme, nor mention on stage the name of their school, institution and programme.

Wearing any part of a school uniform or anything that can identify a school, institution or programme, or mentioning the name of the institution, will result in marks being deducted by the judges.

Follow the time limits for all speeches

All contestants should observe the time limits for each speech. A bell will ring at the end of the speech time limit to tell the contestant that time is up. When the bell rings at the end of their speech time limit, the contestant must finish their speech, otherwise marks will be deducted by the judges. If the speech is less than the minimum time requested as specified above, marks will also deducted.

Your prepared speech must be your own work

You should not use the work of others, nor should the speech be written by AI or other online tools.

You must not bring anything with you on stage

When you deliver your speech, you are not allowed to use notes, cue cards, visual aids or any type of props.

Avoid copying others

In order to avoid plagiarising another contestant (or otherwise copying from them), those contestants who have not yet performed on stage are not allowed to enter the venue to watch or listen to other contestants' speeches in the same category. The only time this is permitted is when contestants are specifically instructed and arranged by the Organising Staff as part of the contestants' waiting order arrangement before their performance on stage. The Organising Committee reserves the right to supervise contestants at all times.

No young children

Children under school age (i.e. under 6 years old) are not allowed to enter the contest venue.

No food or drink

No food or drinks are allowed in the contest venue.

Important Note: Penalty points and potential disqualification

If, in the opinion of the judges, a contestant breaks a rule, he or she will have penalty points deducted from his/her score. Moreover, the contestant risks being disqualified from the competition if, in the opinion of the Organising Committee, the offence is considered a serious breach of competition rules.

All judges' decisions are final

Once scores are verified by the Organising Committee, all judges' decisions are considered final. No breakdown of judges' scores will be given.

Judging criteria

The judge panel will consist of experienced English experts, scholars, and professors.

The main judging criteria are:

1. Speech Content, Organisation, Language and Relevance
2. Speaker's Voice, Modulation and Fluency
3. Overall Performance of Speaker and Impact on Audience

Guidance for contestants on the scoring criteria:

1. Speech Content, Organisation, Language and Relevance

This is all about the speech prepared and written by the contestant. The speech needs to answer the question or address the issue in the Topic – anything in the speech that is not clearly related to the Topic will be ignored by the judges. The speech should showcase the contestant's knowledge and use of English language: grammar, vocabulary, expressions, etc. The audience should be able to easily identify, understand and follow the overall argument, main points and important information in the speech. The speech is a chance to demonstrate creativity and originality, grabbing and holding the audience's attention.

Things to check when preparing a speech:

The speech is wholly relevant to the Topic, and is well-organised and logical (so the audience can follow and understand easily).

There is a clear opening, the structure is outlined and main points are highlighted, and there is a logical conclusion.

The speech includes relevant examples and evidence to support the main argument and points (e.g. personal experiences, stories in the news, statistics, and so on).

The speech is interesting to listen to and is persuasive (it convinces the audience to agree with the main argument or points).

There is strong coherence in the speech (using linking devices/expressions to link the different sections and guide the audience), with a clear focus on the main points and argument.

The speaker uses a good range of grammar and vocabulary accurately to convey precise meaning.

The speech is interesting to listen to, with appropriate and effective use of (for example) originality, or humour, or surprise, or emotion, or facts and statistics, or quotations, and so on.

2. Speaker's Voice, Modulation and Fluency

This is all about how the speaker sounds when they are speaking. The audience needs to be able to hear and understand the speaker clearly, without any effort or misunderstanding, so the speaker needs to pronounce words and expressions clearly and distinctly (i.e. good articulation), and needs to use intonation and stress to 'show' the audience what information is most important. Modulation (varying pitch, tone, volume, pace) should be used effectively and appropriately to add emotion, emphasis and interest to what is being said. The speaker should speak fluently and smoothly (neither too slowly nor too quickly) while being fully intelligible.

Things to check when preparing a speech:

The speaker has good, clear pronunciation and articulation.

The speaker can use a wide range of words and expressions accurately and with impact.

The speaker uses stress and intonation effectively to highlight and emphasise key information.

The speaker speaks fluently and smoothly with good rhythm and rate of speech.

The speaker uses voice modulation appropriately to convey meaning beyond the words.

The speaker avoids unforced and unnecessary repetition, hesitation, fragmentation (sounding disjointed), stops or long pauses, and anything unnatural sounding.

The speaker sounds confident and at ease at all times when speaking.

3. Overall Performance of Speaker and Impact of Speech

This is all about the impression the speaker makes on the audience. The speaker should make a strong first impression on the audience, grab their interest, and continue to hold their attention throughout the speech. The speaker can use rhetorical devices (e.g. metaphor, simile, alliteration, parallelism, rhetorical questions) to increase the impact of what they are saying, and should skilfully use non-verbal skills to enhance their meaning: gestures and movement, eye contact, posture and facial expression (these should add to the speech, not distract). Speakers should appear confident on stage, with their personal style of speaking appropriate to the speech content.

Things to check when preparing a speech:

The speaker makes a strong first impression.

The speaker ends with a strong conclusion.

The speaker makes appropriate use of rhetorical devices for emphasis, impact and clarity.

The speaker use non-verbal skills well to enhance the impact of what of they are saying: gesture, facial expression, eye contact, posture and movement.

The speaker's personal style is appropriate to the topic and content of their speech, and this should enhance the overall impact of what they are saying. (Speakers can have different personal styles: emotive, passionate, humorous, light-hearted, etc.)

The speaker maintains a strong, clear, confident delivery from start to finish

Important Note

The Chinese version of the Contest information shall be final if any discrepancy between the English and Chinese versions should arise. The Organising Committee reserves the right to interpret, change and update the above information without prior notice.
